

Phase 5 Museum Touchscreen Screen Bible

Darts & Pats exhibit / museum-grade touchscreen hardening / landscape, portrait, desktop preview, and reduced-motion review.

This pass prepares the exhibit for public touchscreen use without adding new exhibit sections. The work hardens orientation behavior, target sizing, drawer readability, portrait layouts, hidden operator diagnostics, and review artifacts for a human or vision-capable design critique.

What Changed For Landscape

Landscape mode keeps the theatrical parade, left Memory Rail, wide Memory Corridor stage, side walls, floor timeline, wide Follow the Strings corkboard, multi-column Open Drawer shelf, and broad reading drawer. Large landscape and 4K screens now scale the exhibit shell and typography so the experience remains spacious without becoming a tiny centered website.

What Changed For Portrait

Portrait mode converts the Memory Rail into a bottom object tray, keeps the attractor title and clipping from overlapping, stacks the Memory Corridor into a vertical hallway, wraps the floor timeline, turns Darts and Pats walls into readable shelves, reduces Follow the Strings node density, and makes the reading drawer nearly full-screen with larger close/previous/next controls.

Touchscreen Hardening

Coarse-pointer mode increases primary button heights, keeps secondary controls above practical kiosk minimums, preserves visible focus states, and avoids tiny scrollbars as the main navigation. Start Over and idle reset return to The Breeze Parade. A hidden operator diagnostics panel can be opened by seven taps in the lower-right corner or Alt+Shift+D during testing.

Remaining Design Risks

The portrait string-board is intentionally simplified, but it remains the densest screen and should receive careful human/vision review. The Memory Corridor is stronger in landscape than portrait because its core metaphor is a hallway; portrait now behaves intentionally, but it should be tested on the real kiosk for standing-distance readability. Placeholder CSS art should remain until the screen bible receives critique; final Image 2 assets should not be generated until then.

Likely Museum Failure Points To Review

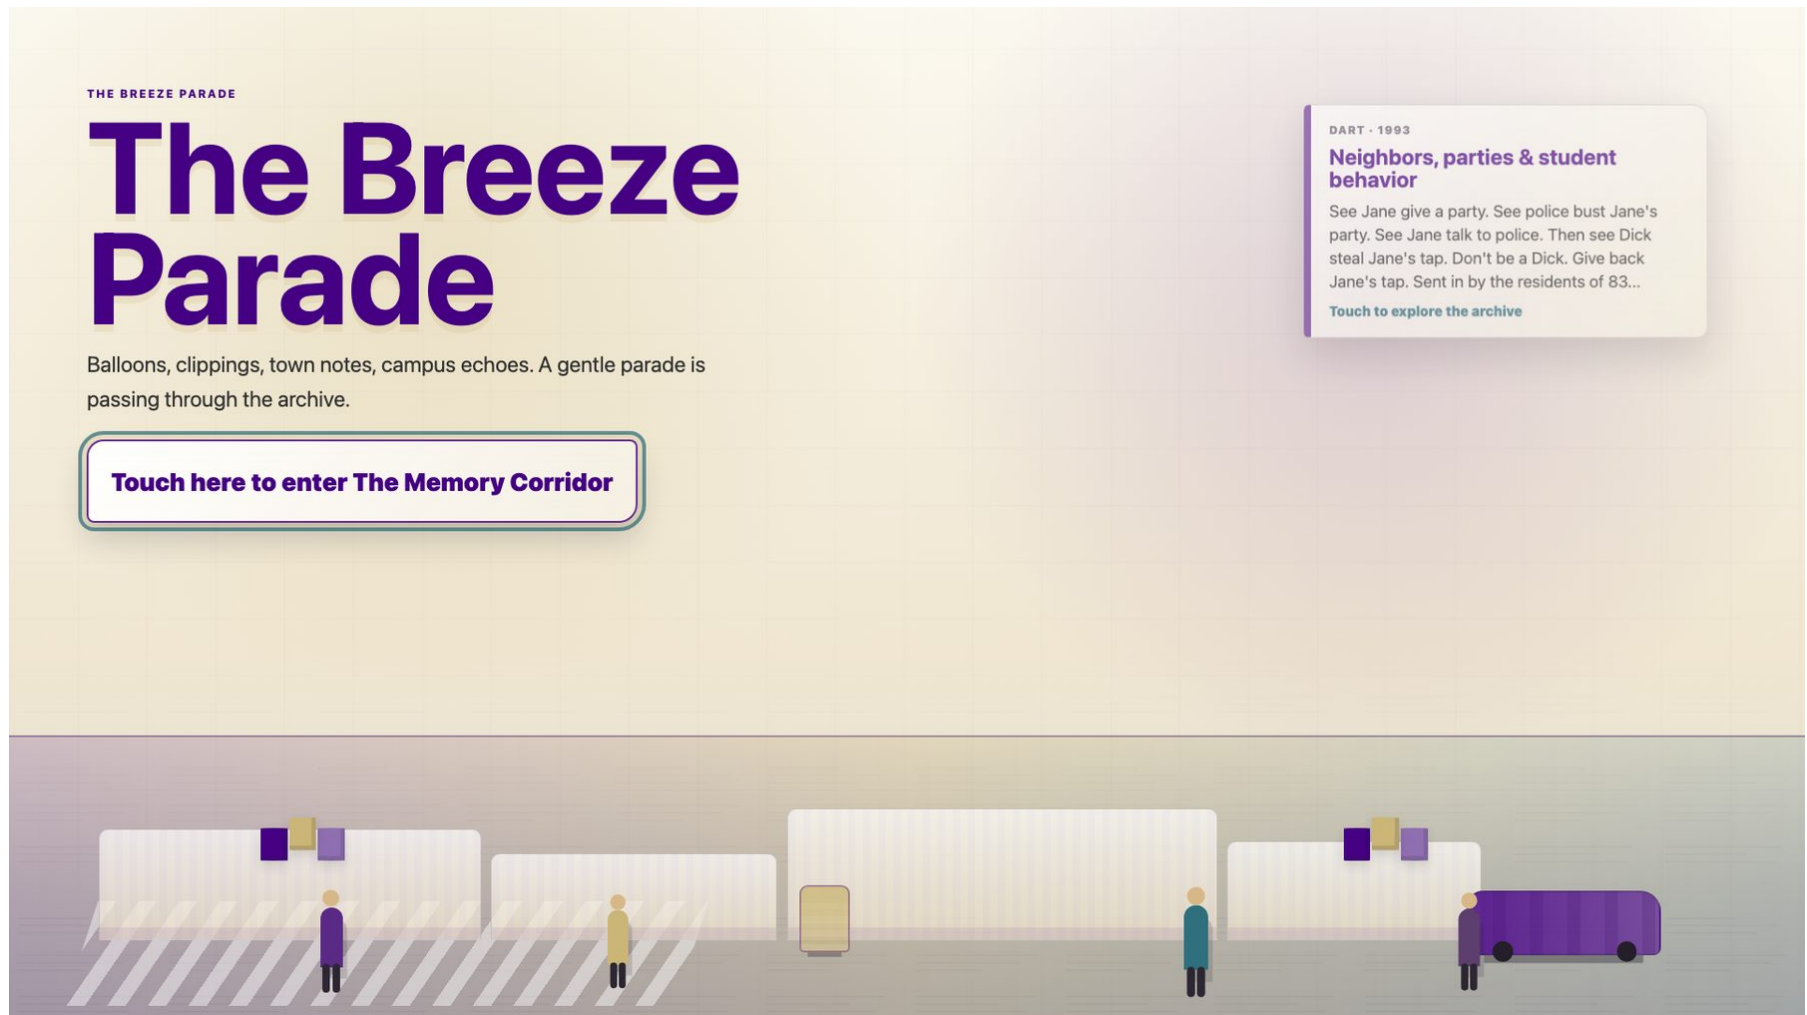

Most likely risks are high-ambient-light contrast, portrait string-board crowding, rail tray reachability on very tall screens, and whether visitors understand that The Breeze Parade is tappable beyond the main button. No current screen is intentionally dependent on hover, login, saved state, sound, or external links.

You be the Dreeze editor

Read a hidden card, guess whether it was a Dart or Pat, then reveal how it appeared and where it fits in the exhibit.

Some cards are held out or masked because they give away their own form.

A motorist-in-distress dart to the Virginia state police officer who watched and proceeded to yell at two clueless but determined students as they attempted to change a blown-out tire on I-81 last Wednesday while trying to get home for Thanksgiving. Sent in by two tired R.A.'s who were just trying to make it home for the holiday.

All entries are drawn from Darts & Pats published in The Breeze, James Madison University's student newspaper. They are presented as historical evidence of perception, humor, grievance, gratitude, and civic memory—not as neutral measurements of the town-gown relationship.
